

Hong Kong Community College (HKCC)

More programmes to widen choice for students

The 2007/08 academic year will see the completion of HKCC's two new vibrant campuses in Hung Hom Bay and West Kowloon, coupled with the restructuring of its academic programmes to provide students with more comprehensive choices of subject specialization.

Starting from September this year, HKCC's academic programmes will be grouped under four main schemes, namely, Applied Social Sciences, Business, Humanities and Communication, and Science and Technology. Together with three other specialized subject programmes including Beauty and Health Therapy, Design and Health Studies, a wide array of 26 programmes will be offered.

In particular, within the Applied Social Sciences scheme, the three new programmes, Psychology, Social Welfare, and Sociology and Culture, will be introduced. A new programme on Language and Culture will also be added into the Humanities and Communication scheme.

These new programmes will further complement HKCC's quality associate degree education in arts, sciences, social sciences, business as well as specialized subjects.

After this programme revamp and enhancement exercise, students will be allowed to select different subjects in the first year of study and make their choices of programme specialization in the second year. ♦

Brushing up youngsters' English in a fun way

For the second year in a row, HKCC supported the English Festival organized by the Standing Committee on Language Education and Research (SCOLAR). This year, more than 60 HKCC students and teachers trained up over 300 secondary school students in an English Language Camp Leader Training Programme held in April. This programme prepared the secondary school students for organizing an English Language Camp on 5 May for over 1,600 primary students from 34 schools. On the event day, the participants took part in alphabet puzzles, interactive vocabulary games and group singing, all conducted in English. ♦

All smiles for the participants of the English Language Camp Programme.

School of Professional Education and Executive Development (SPEED)

Displaying the thoughts of Applied and Media Arts graduates

Graduating students of SPEED's Bachelor of Arts in Applied and Media Arts programme showcased their creative works in a graduation show entitled "Chop a Thought" in March. The students not only grasped the chance to creatively express their feelings and emotions, but also initiated interflow of ideas and interactions with the exhibition visitors. ♦
