How does frequent use of e-devices affect the brain in understanding complex concepts?

The use of electronic gadgets is deeply rooted in our daily life. Computers and all sorts of hand-held devices have enabled us a convenient and efficient lifestyle. While many people think electronic devices can help their learning, others say digital gadgets may cause distraction. A recent research by PolyU has shed light on the correlation between the frequency in e-device usage and brain activity. Does the use of electronic devices benefit/impair learning? It may be too early to draw a conclusion.
