	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The completion and submission of all component assignments are required for passing the subject; and • Student must pass all component(s) if he/she is to pass the subject.
Objectives	Specific objectives of the subject: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. To increase students’ intellectual, literacy (English reading and writing) capacity through familiarization and critical understanding of the key literature on how the forces of globalization have changed the socio-economic landscapes of contemporary societies; critical perspective for understanding and empathizing; 2. To allow students to empathize and develop the capacity for life-long learning through the development of a clear and broader picture of how such global forces have impacted on the lives, opportunities, values and aspirations of middle class with a local and global vision; 3. To critically assess whether policies are needed to be developed to ensure protection not only for the needy and vulnerable, but also for middle class people who are losing grounds; 4. To identify and investigate specific issues relating to social mobility and widening social inequalities in the age of globalization so as to ascertain measures and policies for appropriate actions in community, organizations, social and political institutions to achieving balanced growth and sustainability.
Intended Learning Outcomes (Note 1)	Upon completion of the subject, students will be able to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> (a) Expand their intellectual capacity and English reading and writing skills beyond their disciplinary domain in understanding the forces of globalization in creating changes from a holistic, multidisciplinary perspective; (b) Become more aware of the major local and international works on the complexities and the impacts of globalization on people, especially middle class, in contemporary societies; (c) Recognize the potential consequences of globalization, especially those dealing with life opportunities and ethical issues that impact directly on the social well being of society; (d) Acquire a broad foundation knowledge and analytical skills that can be adapted to underpin they major studies and life-long learning; (e) Develop a broader horizon in understanding social inequality, social mobility and middle class in global and local contexts. Please explain how the stated learning outcomes relate to the following three essential features of GUR subjects: Literacy, Higher order thinking, and Skills for life-long learning

	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Literacy: Students will be required to attend English online workshops and engage in substantial readings to prepare for the book report to indicate their knowledge in understanding the complex but uneven consequences globalization can impact on people and societies; 2. Higher order thinking: Students will be exposed to critical analysis of how middle class, long considered as the major pillar of contemporary affluent societies, have been particularly changed by global forces that are transforming socio-economic, cultural and political landscapes in the world. Moreover, they are required to demonstrate their critical thinking, creativity and methodological competence in their written and verbal assignment for the subject; 3. Life-long learning: Students will gain an introductory but critical understanding of the challenges faced by middle class in a globalized economic and social system that in turn affect their quality of life and social well being. The relevance and urgency of the subject matter should inspire students actively to engage in further enquiry and other life-long learning activities.

Explanation of the appropriateness of the assessment methods in assessing the intended learning outcomes:

Book Report for ER and EW Requirement:

To enable students to meet the “ER” and “EW” requirement, they will be required to view online a short lecture series, attend tutorials focusing on reading skills and writing strategies and receive comments from ELC instructors to improve their English writing skills.

They are also expected to study the prescribed readings on the Reading List, critically evaluate the key concepts or arguments in the book and explore the relevance of these concepts or arguments in the local context, and submit a book review of 1,500 - 2,500 words.

Term End Quiz:

Will further contribute to students becoming more familiar with the major local and international works on the complexities and impacts of globalization on people, especially middle class, in contemporary societies; and identify the potential consequences of globalization, especially those relating to life opportunities and ethical issues that may impact directly on the social well being of society.

Presentation and Participation:

Students are divided into small group and asked to prepare an in-class presentation based on real world case studies. This will contribute to students acquiring a broad foundation knowledge and analytical skills that can be adapted to underpin their major studies and life-long learning; and gaining of broader horizon in understanding social inequality, social mobility and middle class in global and local contexts. Students will be individually assessed for their performances in presentation and participation in discussions during the lectures and presentations.

Note 1: Intended Learning Outcomes

Intended learning outcomes should state what students should be able to do or attain upon completion of the subject. Subject outcomes are expected to contribute to the attainment of the overall programme outcomes.

Note 2: Subject Synopsis/ Indicative Syllabus

The syllabus should adequately address the intended learning outcomes. At the same time over-crowding of the syllabus should be avoided.

Note 3: Teaching/Learning Methodology

This section should include a brief description of the teaching and learning methods to be employed to facilitate learning, and a justification of how the methods are aligned with the intended learning outcomes of the subject.

Note 4: Assessment Method

This section should include the assessment method(s) to be used and its relative weighting, and indicate which of the subject intended learning outcomes that each method purports to assess. It should also provide a brief explanation of the appropriateness of the assessment methods in assessing the intended learning outcomes.
