Objectives	This course adopts an interdisciplinary approach to analyze Chinese urbanization since the 1970s to the present. We will explore the processes of rural transformation, urban development, social inequality, gender disparity, labor migration and alternative visions of sustainable growth. The government has worthy objectives of delivering a substantial increase in the population's living standards, and yet the outcomes of economic and socio-spatial changes have been uneven. Our goal is to evaluate the emerging opportunities and limitations facing Chinese people to meet the challenges of globalization in contemporary China.
Intended Learning Outcomes (Note 1)	Upon completion of the subject, students will be able to: a. familiarize with the dynamics and processes of rural and urban development in contemporary China against the Teaching/Learning Methodology (Note 3)	This course comprises lectures and in-class activities in three-hour sessions. The lectures will introduce key ideas and concepts based on multiple sources of readings regarding the dynamic processes of globalization and urbanization. The lectures will employ real-world, contemporary examples to provide students with a better understanding of the urban life in globalizing Chinese megacities.  The teaching and learning materials will include screenings of video clips, news and interviews. An interaction and participatory environment will nurture students to work together to apply and discuss concepts that they learn from lectures and assigned readings.

	To acquire academic reading and writing skills, students will be required to complete a quiz and an individual essay based on the required readings.

Note 1: Intended Learning Outcomes

Intended learning outcomes should state what students should be able to do or attain upon completion of the subject. Subject outcomes are expected to contribute to the attainment of the overall programme outcomes.

Note 2: Subject Synopsis/Indicative Syllabus

The syllabus should adequately address the intended learning outcomes. At the same time over-crowding of the syllabus should be avoided.

Note 3: Teaching/Learning Methodology

This section should include a brief description of the teaching and learning methods to be employed to facilitate learning, and a justification of how the methods are aligned with the intended learning outcomes of the subject.

Note 4: Assessment Method

This section should include the assessment method(s) to be used and its relative weighting, and indicate which of the subject intended learning outcomes that each method purports to assess. It should also provide a brief explanation of the appropriateness of the assessment methods in assessing the intended learning outcomes.
