Objectives	1. To provide intensive training on professional helping relationship building strategies and intervention methods in supervised real settings. 2. To develop the cognitive, affective, and psychomotor learning in counselling practice. 3. To introduce the characteristics and dimensions related to such counsellor-client relationship.

Intended Learning Outcomes	Upon completion of the subject, students will be able to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> Appraise the broad-based knowledge of human service with the professional knowledge and skills for guidance and counselling in working with different clientele. Select relevant knowledge of related disciplines in case assessment, formulation of intervention plans and evaluation of the individual client's needs Evaluate the working relationship building process and appreciate the roles of counsellor in the helping process.
Subject Synopsis / Indicative Syllabus	This module provides students the opportunity of direct practice of counselling under close and intensive supervision. Students are required to complete a supervised practicum including 50 / 62.5[#] hours of face-to-face client contact, 21 / 20[#] hours of group supervision and 4 hours of individual supervision. Students are expected to develop competence in establishing counselling relationship, theory-practice integration, provision of counselling intervention, and outcome evaluation. Students receive on-site weekly individual and group supervision, in which they are also encouraged to critically reflect on the relevance of the theories and practice approaches acquired through coursework for the local context. # for students of 2019 cohort and onward
Teaching / Learning Methodology	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> A counselling service is set up and operated on campus to support the Counselling Practicum. Real cases of persons with genuine needs for counselling are recruited in the community. Students are assigned to these cases and arrange counselling interviews with these persons. Students are organized into small groups and each group is responsible for providing counselling in a certain time-slot of the week during the practicum period which runs for 25 weeks in an academic year. The counselling sessions are video/audio-recorded for review and discussion. Students receive group supervision as well as individual guidance given on-site and weekly by a well-qualified supervisor. Students are guided to make use of the learning gained from the programme. Finally, students are required to write a term paper to conceptualize the case by integrating theories and practice of not only counselling and guidance, but also theories related to human development, social policy, ethics and human service and other subjects they have taken from the programme.
