Objectives

This course aims to provide students with a foundational knowledge of social transformation of China since the early 20th Century. Students will learn about how major social relations – relations between China and the world, between the countryside and the city, between men and women, between intellectuals and peasants, etc.– have been reconstructed in each import period of modern China. They will learn to evaluate social transformation from the perspectives of rural and urban livelihoods. In the process, they will gain critical understanding of “national conditions” that both enables and constrains China’s development in the global context.

Intended Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of the subject, students will be able to:

(a) have an enhanced foundational knowledge about Chinese social and political transformation.

(b) critically evaluate national conditions of China’s transformation;

(c) connect China’s transformation with the changing global context.

(d) have an experience in organizing and writing a coherent book report or essay in Chinese.

7. The Post-Mao Reform: Rural Reform
8. The Post-Mao Reform: Urban Reform
9. Economic Miracle and Social Inequality
10. Debating the Reform and Rethinking Socialism
Teaching/Learning Methodology

(Note 3)

1. Context Creation: The instructor will use a variety of teaching materials (short films, ethnographies, and social science works) to create historical-social context for learning.

2. Problem Posing and Problem Solving: Once students are placed in a specific historical-social context, they will be encouraged to pose their own questions and propose solutions. The instructor and students will then examine how questions and solutions have been actually posed and played out in history and why. This has been used before and proves to be an effective way to animate students’ interest.

3. Students will be required to engage in class discussion. The instructor will encourage students to have sociological and ethnographic imagination when discussing issues embedded in different contexts.

4. As part of the reading requirements for subjects with a “CR” designation, students are required to read the assigned book in addition to other readings covered in lectures. They are required to participate in instructional and assessment activities organized by CBS to acquire the appropriate reading skills and to demonstrate their understanding of the extensive text.

5. As part of the writing requirements for subjects with a “CW” designation, students are required to write a review essay of 3,000 words in Chinese on a book chosen from a list provided by the instructor. They are also required to attend the tutorials organized by CBS to acquire the appropriate writing skills.

Note 1: Intended Learning Outcomes

Intended learning outcomes should state what students should be able to do or attain upon completion of the subject. Subject outcomes are expected to contribute to the attainment of the overall programme outcomes.

Note 2: Subject Synopsis/Indicative Syllabus

The syllabus should adequately address the intended learning outcomes. At the same time over-crowding of the syllabus should be avoided.

Note 3: Teaching/Learning Methodology

This section should include a brief description of the teaching and learning methods to be employed to facilitate learning, and a justification of how the methods are aligned with the intended learning outcomes of the subject.

Note 4: Assessment Method

This section should include the assessment method(s) to be used and its relative weighting, and indicate which of the subject intended learning outcomes that each method purports to assess. It should also provide a brief explanation of the appropriateness of the assessment methods in assessing the intended learning outcomes.
