About us

The Department of English and Communication is a leading provider of undergraduate and postgraduate-level programmes in applied English language studies for the professions. Our students graduate with language and communication skills that are highly prized by professional organisations in Hong Kong and beyond.

Through up-to-date knowledge and state-of-the-art research, we equip students to work effectively in a variety of professional contexts, including health communication, teaching and learning, media and technology, and intercultural communication. By focusing on the skills and expertise needed to succeed in the global workplace, we strive for 'Linguistics Excellence in Professional Contexts.'

The programme

The Bachelor of Arts (Honours) in English and Applied Linguistics (BAEAL) aims to nurture graduates with the abilities/attributes needed to become competent English language professionals and responsible global citizens in the 21st century. The programme aims to produce graduates with:

- a high level of competence in English;
- a sound understanding of the theoretical disciplines underlying applied English language studies and the integrated use of the language; and
- the strong ability to apply their knowledge and generic linguistic skills in a variety of professional communication contexts.

Programme Aims & Characteristics

What are English and Applied Linguistics?

- Build your practical skills and subject knowledge
- Increase your career opportunities as you become a proficient and confident English user
- Develop your ability to communicate professionally across media and contexts
- Satisfy your curiosity about languages and cultures

Programme aims

Our programme aims to nurture graduates:

- who have a firm grounding in applied linguistics and communication which can be critically and creatively applied in a variety of business and management contexts;
- who are capable of exercising judgment and developing intellectual curiosity to work both independently and as part of a team;
- who will have the potential to become future ethical leaders and entrepreneurs excelling in communication for professional purposes;
- who possess a high level of professional communicative competence in English;
- who have an awareness and understanding of intercultural communication in multilingual settings that enhances their global outlook and cultural appreciation as socially responsible global citizens; and
- who can apply strong communication skills and technical acumen to solve real-world problems effectively in local and global multilingual professional/business settings.

Programme characteristics

- The programme promotes the all-round development of students' potential to the fullest extent for the English language profession.
- Along with a major in English and Applied Linguistics, students can also take a minor in another discipline offered by the University.
- A variety of teaching and learning methods are adopted, including language and computer laboratory work, online English language databases, role-plays, simulations, talks by guest speakers, and workplace visits and placements.
- Students explore the global and cultural dimensions of the subjects studied and further develop themselves professionally through participating in summer programmes abroad and credit-earning student exchange programmes overseas.
- The emphasis placed by the programme on self-directed learning, project-based learning, and group work helps to develop students' sense of entrepreneurship, leadership and teamwork.
- Students will acquire a set of essential skills, such as research and study skills, analytical and problem-solving skills, language and communication skills, self-reflection, peer evaluation and team work, to facilitate their life-long learning journey.

Recognition by the Education Bureau of Hong Kong*

The programme is recognised by the Education Bureau of Hong Kong and its Standing Committee on Language Education and Research as an English Language Major Degree Programme that meets the Hong Kong government's Language Proficiency Requirement. Registered students are eligible to apply for the Scholarship for Prospective English Teachers offered by the Education Bureau. The Scholarship for local and non-local students is HK$50,000 and HK$80,000 per year, respectively.

Recognition is subject to assessment.*

Work-Integrated Education

You should complete a mandatory Work-Integrated Education (WIE) placement in Hong Kong, the Chinese mainland, or overseas. WIE is work-based learning experiences which take place in an organisational context relevant to a student's future profession or to the development of general skills that will be valuable in that profession. WIE can take different forms, such as an internship in a company or organisation in Hong Kong, the Chinese mainland, or overseas during the semester or in summer. Students can also find a wide range of international WIE placements in over 18 countries, including Canada, Japan, South Korea, the United Kingdom, and the USA through the Global Engagement Office of the University.

Student exchange programmes

Students can apply for credit-earning student exchange programmes and study for a semester overseas at one of our partner universities in China, Japan, South Korea, or an English-speaking country.

"Adjusting myself to a completely different culture is not easy. However, the difficulties associated with the exchange semester have taught me countless life lessons."

Awardee of Outstanding Student, Faculty of Humanities 2019

The BAESP* is a very comprehensive programme, offering a wide variety of interesting courses, which equipped me with effective communication strategies and professional knowledge of the English language. I believe that through all of these excellent experiences under the programme, I have built a solid linguistic foundation for further advancing and enriching my knowledge of English language and literature by pursuing a postgraduate degree."

Lois CHIU

Awardee of Outstanding Student, Faculty of Humanities 2018

"I chose to study BAESP* because I have strong interest in and deep passion for language. The programme offers holistic courses that emphasise the importance of applying theory to practice. It also developed my intercultural communicative competence, which enabled me to work well with people from different cultural backgrounds on various social projects."

Alumni sharing

My journey in the Department of English has been a memorable ride. We explored everything from timeless literature to the intricacies of business English, ensuring that every lesson is engaging and relevant.

I honed my skills in presenting ideas with confidence and clarity, becoming a passionate spokesperson for my beliefs and aspirations.

Thanks to PolyU, I've also had incredible opportunities that shaped my career. I was honoured to receive a nomination from the Careers and Placement Section for a summer internship in the public sector, building a foundation for my endeavours in a management trainee program upon graduation. Today, I'm actively involved in promoting Hong Kong as a fintech hub.

My global perspective has also blossomed through experiences like representing our university at the Singapore Debate Tournament, Malaysia Youth Summit and serving as an international student ambassador. Language has become more than just a tool for communication; it's my passport to a vibrant global village.

If you're looking for a degree that ignites your passion and opens doors to global opportunities, consider the Department of English and Communication, and discover where your love for language can take you!

Graduate of 2015

In many ways, the person I am today – as a lecturer, a communicator, and a mentor – was shaped by the experiences and opportunities I had at PolyU. During my time as an English major, my alma mater provided more than just education – it opened my mind and established the foundation of my career. My studies exposed me to the depth and complexity of language, while my role as a student ambassador broadened my perspectives.

Engaging with diverse people and ideas taught me the power of communication, which has been invaluable in my master's in applied English linguistics and teaching career. All the experiences now inform my teaching approach, which emphasizes exploration, context, and connection in language learning. The lessons I gained and the teachers I met at the Department do influence my work and my interactions with students, which guide them through discovering the function of language in their lives. The strong foundation and passion for language that my experience instilled in me have left an indelible mark on my professional and personal growth, one that I'm always grateful for.
