Prof. Chu Hung-lam on the Deeper Meaning of Service-Learning

The happy and inspiring news of two esteemed colleagues at PolyU, Dr Stephen Chan (OSL) and Dr Grace Ngai (COMP), winning the 2016 UGC Teaching Award for their working as a team to implement the Service-Learning programme that distinguishes PolyU as a leading tertiary education provider and themselves as devoted teachers prompted me to share my thought about Service-Learning.

Service-Learning is about engaging the student and the community at once and interactively. It is self and community development at the same time. Some may see it pragmatically: students apply what they learn in classroom while society benefits from their application of learning.

But there is more. It is sharing of what one can give for social betterment, and learning about the community and one's social responsibility at the same time. This also distinguishes it from another famous PolyU programme – Work-Integrated Education, which is more about getting the student better prepared for a trade or the workplace. Service-Learning and Work-Integrated Education do not overlap. Service-Learning only adds to better Work-Integrated Education because its spirit of sharing produces a sense of purpose and cultivates values beneficial to the integrity of a profession.

The moral ground of Service-Learning is a manifestation of a common constituent in human beings – that of seeing oneself in other people. Therefore, Service-Learning conveys not merely knowledge, but also human feelings, the heart and the mind. It is an act of love and has a reward of feeling good about having contributed to the good that you have that others should have as well. Appreciation and cherishing of this act makes the service giver affirmative of the worth of his/her action. But the one who praises this act also him/herself finds the joy of sharing. Simply put, when the service giver feels good about what he/she did, the praise giver empathises and feels good about him/herself for having shared the joy of sharing.

I once committed this feeling of sharing to a suite of poems for a student in a sister institution who had volunteered to teach in summer times in remote and poor villages in China for several years in a row. I was touched, and she liked my heartfelt praises. To share with you, the poems, originally in Chinese, are rendered below in English.

I hope this suite of poems gives encouragement to PolyU students to engage in Service-Learning as well.

喜贈歷史系陳麗媚同學連年投身國內扶貧教學活動

(二〇〇二年七月)

萌芽滿山野，土瘠難為苗。放任由天意，一生九敝凋。

保養須培灌，空言鮮矣仁。為求苗可秀，不惜汗流身。

汗流何足惜，旱土不揚塵。想見榮敷葉，柔枝已扎根。

彼土是吾土，我人彼亦人。繁花開有日，甘果味同分。

護苗護到底，種樹種成林。千山行過後，懷抱有餘忻。

A gift to Chan Lai-mei for her years of voluntary teaching to poor children in China

Shoots bud everywhere on the mountain, in the field
Sprouts have difficulty growing in poor soil
Leave them alone to the whim of nature
One will grow but nine will wither

Protect and nourish them, they need soil and water
Empty talk rarely means true love for them
For the sprouts to grow up beautiful
You mind not bathing with sweat

Sweating invites no concern
When the dry soil raises no dust
Imagine the bright and luxuriant leaves
Now the supple stalks are firmly rooted

That land is our land
We are humans as they are
Colorful flowers will soon bloom
We shall share the tasty fruits

Protect the sprouts, protect them all you can
Plant the trees, plant them into a forest
Countless mountains walked through now
Joy remains in your heart

Prof. David Li Shares his Vision for CBS

Prof. Li Chor Shing David joined PolyU as Professor and Head of the Department of Chinese and Bilingual Studies in September 2016. The FH Newsletter has invited Prof. Li to share with us his vision for the Department.

I feel elated and honoured to be appointed as the new Head of Department of Chinese and Bilingual Studies (CBS), which gives me an academically pertinent and institutionally resourceful platform to extend my vision regarding the uplifting of individual plurilingual competence and awareness-raising of the multilingual landscape of Hong Kong society. Together with my colleagues, we will do our utmost to make CBS a major contributor to high-quality teaching and research in four areas: (i) Chinese Language & Linguistics, (ii) Bilingualism & Corporate Communication, (iii) (Chinese-English) Translation & Interpretation, and more recently, (iv) Neuroscience & Speech Therapy.

In all these areas, CBS has received strong institutional support, the latest example being the generous central funding to construct state-of-the-art laboratories for conducting clinical research on patients showing symptoms of various neurocognitive problems (e.g. articulation) that could be traced to specific (mal)functions of the brain. High-quality teaching and learning, including clinical training of top students, could hardly begin without solid research insights, and it is comforting to know that some of those insights originated from CBS colleagues' hard work.

Since the handover on 1 July 1997, the language-in-education policy of the Hong Kong SAR Government came to be known as 'trilingualism and biliteracy' (TAB, 三語兩文), i.e., the ability to speak Cantonese, English and Putonghua, and to read and write Chinese and English. My vision in this regard is to win society's recognition of PolyU graduates' trilingual and biliterate competence, whatever their choice of Major programme and eventual workplace. Enhancing PolyU graduates' TAB profile is naturally a significant learning outcome of CBS programmes, especially those specialising in translation and interpretation, and bilingual corporate communication. In both teaching and research, CBS will strive to play a leadership role in these two disciplinary areas and professional orientations.

CBS also has a track record of facilitating non-Chinese learners' learning of Chinese, both local (e.g., South Asian schoolchildren) and non-local. CBS is a pioneer in offering an MA in Teaching Chinese as a Foreign Language (MATCFL) programme, which has been emulated by other universities. To attract high-caliber students, we will strengthen our overseas practicum component to better prepare them for a rewarding career in TCFL by equipping them with culturally and pedagogically challenging front-line teaching experience.

CBS has been offering two popular Minor programmes, Japanese and Korean. To give PolyU students maximum mileage in their Japanese and Korean studies, we will broaden our network of universities in these two East Asian countries, with a view to facilitating their proficiency development in these target languages through immersion for one semester or longer. To further extend our offering of modern languages, additional modern-language electives are being considered. Finally, regarding the nation's One Belt One Road (OBOR) initiative, I believe CBS can make concrete contributions to one of the five Cooperation Priorities: 'people-to-people bond' (促進民心相通).

Corpcommsynergy: An E-learning Community for Promoting Active Learning and Knowledge Sharing among Corporate Communication Subjects

The project, "Corcommsynergy: an eLearning and knowledge sharing platform for the promotion of active learning and learner-learner interaction", was funded by the Advisory Committee on eLearning (ACE) of PolyU. The project was proposed and executed by members of the Bilingual Corporate Communication team in response to PolyU's mission and development to better prepare students for the profession of corporate communication (CC) by equipping them with CC knowledge as well as research, analytical and critical thinking skills.

The project team has constructed an e-learning platform which provides useful materials of CC and an online space enabling students to interact with other users and share their work of CC courses for all the full-time teachers of CC subjects and students, who were enrolled in CC subjects to facilitate their teaching and learning of CC in this project. During the project execution, the team has conducted three rounds of evaluation on the effectiveness and the impact of Corpcommsynergy among the students by tracking their usage of the topical concept and collecting their feedback toward its usage. The result shows that the platform has attracted 8,241 times of visit, 85 pieces of shared work and 86 users to participate in the online discussions and to create 183 posts for four consecutive semesters from 2014/15 to 2015/16.

Apart from frequent visits, interactions and sharing on the platform and massive positive feedback were received from the students. A student has written in her reflective journal that "I think the e-learning platform is very useful to students who take the CC subjects... The e-learning platform provides a space for us to discuss. Due to the tight schedule, we may not have time to share the learning experience to our classmates. I can read the feedback from my classmates and learn from their experiences a lot."

By drawing upon the result and the students' feedback, the completion of Corpcommsynergy's project helps shed light on the benefits of constructing an e-learning platform for a newly developed academic area. An e-learning platform with plenty of relevant subject resources, interacting and sharing features helps 1) facilitate learning beyond classroom, 2) promote student-student and teacher-student dialogic communication, and 3) cultivate a sharing culture in the profession.

Basic construct of Corpcommsynergy

By designing and building the platform based on the features of learning, sharing, and interacting, Corpcommsynergy becomes an effective eLearning and knowledge sharing platform which enables students to learn actively, think critically, share and seek information constantly.

22nd Congregation

Faculty of Humanities (FH) held its 22nd Congregation at the Jockey Club Auditorium on 22 October 2016. A total of 796 graduates from FH received their conferment this year. Among the graduates, there were 7 doctoral degrees, 541 master's degrees, 238 bachelor's degrees and 10 postgraduate diplomas and certificates.

Sharing the joy and excitement of the graduates, Faculty Dean, Prof. Chu Hung-lam, gave the opening remarks. Prof. Chu congratulated the graduates' accomplishments and thanked staff members, alumni, advisors, partners and friends of the Faculty for their support. Dr Tam King-fai, Interim Head of the Department of Chinese Culture, gave the congratulatory address and extended his warmest blessings to the graduates.

On behalf of the graduates of the taught postgraduate programmes of FH, Mr Xue Jie from the Master of Arts in Chinese Culture programme and Ms Mary Elizabeth Johannes from the Master of Arts in English Language Teaching programme gave the valedictory speech. Miss Chan Tsz Wing from the Bachelor of Arts (Hons) in Bilingual Studies programme gave the valedictory speech on behalf of the graduates from FH undergraduate programmes.

To meet the changing needs of Hong Kong and the world, the Faculty has been introducing new programmes over the years and the year 2016 saw the first graduating class of the Master of Arts in Bilingual Corporate Communication programme, Master of Arts in Japanese Media and Communication programme, Master of Speech Therapy programme, and Bachelor of Arts in Bilingual Interdisciplinary Chinese Studies programme.

Enhancing International Dimension to Our Education

With our fast-growing international reputation, more and more students are interested in studying with the Faculty of Humanities (FH) in recent years. In this new academic year, the Broad Discipline of Language, Culture and Communication (BDLCC) welcomes 10 international undergraduate freshmen from Korea, Malaysia and Taiwan.

The quality of our applicants also continues to rise. Among them there are “straight-A” students who scored full marks in their local public examination. FH believes that a good international mix will help all our students understand the world better, and equip them with the competencies needed to live and work in an increasingly globalised society.

One of our newly admitted international students, Tan Cai Ee from Malaysia, shares her new life at PolyU, “I’m extremely grateful to receive full scholarship from the Faculty of Humanities which has given me such a great opportunity to achieve my dream of studying abroad. Hong Kong is always my ideal place to study due to its high standard of internationalism and good reputation. PolyU is a wonderful place for students who’d like to enjoy fun university life and good education at the same time. All the staff and schoolmates are very friendly and helpful which make me feel comfortable. Faculty of Humanities is my first choice because I’m interested in learning different kind of languages. Meanwhile, I also wish to enhance and master the languages I have learned, including Chinese and English. I believe that language is a practical skill which is vital in our lives as mastering various languages enables us to communicate globally and to approach different cultures.”

(Right) “It was nice to make new friends and exchange what we know about our own cultures. I look forward to meeting more friends at PolyU and to learning about Hong Kong”, says a new student from Korea, Lee Yeajin (second from right).

Celebrating 20 years of National Putonghua Proficiency Test in Hong Kong

A forum to commemorate the 20th anniversary of administering Putonghua Shuiping Ceshi (PSC) was hosted by the Department of Chinese and Bilingual Studies on 28 October 2016. Mr Du Zhanyuan, Vice Minister of Education, commended on the contribution made by the National grade examiners in Hong Kong in promoting the standard of Putonghua through training and assessment. PolyU President, Prof. Timothy W. Tong, gave a welcoming speech while Mrs Marion Lai, Permanent Secretary for Education, and Mr Garson Huang, Chairman of the Standing Committee on Language Education and Research, spoke on the Putonghua curriculum in schools and language enhancement policies at large. Representatives from local and the Chinese mainland Test Centres reviewed the twenty years' progress, and Mr Liu Pengjian, Vice President of the Institute of Applied Linguistics, concluded on past experience and anticipated future development.

The event was co-organised by the Putonghua and Language Test Centre of the Institute of Applied Linguistics and the Joint Committee of Putonghua Testing Centres amongst the higher education sector in HK.

Delegates of the Faculty Discuss the Role of the University in the Global City

Following the success of the inaugural WC2 Symposium in London last year, the second WC2 Summer Symposium was held from 8 to 12 August 2016. Mr Daniel Recktenwald, a PhD student from the Faculty who participated in the Symposium, was invited by the FH Newsletter to share about the event.

The World Class World Cities University Network is a collaboration of 11 universities from the Americas, Europe, Asia and Africa. Its second Symposium was held at the Technische Universität Berlin. It featured 140 participants, half of them students, from a variety of disciplines including City Planning, Engineering, Rehabilitation Science and Applied Linguistics. The diversity was connected by this year's overarching topic "Universities as Urban Actors: Towards the New Urban Agenda". Split into the five theme groups of Business, Eco-campus, Global Cultures, Global Health and Transport, the attendants discussed the role of the University for achieving the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Of the 17 PolyU representatives, four were delegates from the Faculty of Humanities.

Esterina Nervino, Daniel Recktenwald and Prof. Huang Chu-ren joined the Global Cultures theme, and Prof. Christian Matthiessen participated in the Health group. In the first two days, each theme began with presentation of a series of thought-provoking papers by selected speakers. Among them were also the talks by Prof. Huang and Prof. Matthiessen. The third day began with a group working session that was productive and well received. The representatives of a particular city were grouped together and each group was asked to fill out a polar area diagram provided by the organisers.

The topics of the chart were the key issues of our respective cities with regard to the New Urban Agenda and the SDG's.

The result was a series of very different diagrams, each highlighting the particular strengths and weaknesses of a city. For Hong Kong, the group pointed out the problems of expensive housing, low levels of public welfare and the extremely competitive education system. On the positive side, the work group pointed out the excellent access to health care facilities, efficient public transport and low unemployment. Together with the pre-symposium preparation, these events were the foundation for the student-led work of the following days. In small groups of five to seven people, students conceptualised, planned and realised a project.

The project by the members of the Faculty of Humanities was a Photo Essay that highlighted the difficulty of defining the notion of 'Global University'. In their case study, they pointed out the disjunction between students' expectation and experience at internationalised universities. Other group projects of the Global Cultures Theme were the re-design of the WC2 Networks Website, a short documentary film and the concept for a video game. Esterina Nervino presented the final version of the Photo Essay during the closing session, which will soon be available on the new website. The Symposium was an excellent event for all participants. It allowed students to contribute and share their local experience and subject specific expertise in the context of a large and important project. It was a truly global and interdisciplinary learning opportunity.

Internationalisation in Action: Learning Corporate Communication with Seasoned Practitioners in New York

This year, our newly launched Master of Arts in Bilingual Corporate Communication (MABCC) programme held a debut Forum on Strategic Communication Leadership with the Executive Master in Corporate Communication at Aarhus University and Corporate Communication International at Baruch College of City University of New York on 22-26 August 2016 in New York.

During the 5-day intensive forum discussion, our MA students had a fruitful and eye-opening experience in learning and exchanging views with first-class corporate communication practitioners from world's leading companies in the US and Denmark. The top-notch communication specialists include Mr Nicholas Ashooh, Senior Director of Corporate & Executive Communication, APCO Worldwide, Inc.; Mr Robert DeFillippo, former Corporate Vice President & Chief Communications Officer, Prudential Financial, Inc.; Mr Peter Hirsch, Global Consulting Partner, OgilvyRED; Mr Dick Martin, former Executive Vice President of Public Relations, Employee Communications and Brand Management, AT&T; Mr Ray Pellechia, FINRA, Director of Media Relations; Ms Shelly Spector, Founder & CEO Spector Corporate Communications cum Founder & Director of the Museum of Public Relations and Ms Charlotte Fox, Global Organizational Communication Leader, Johnson & Johnson Medical Devices, just to name a few.

The Forum participants also visited world class communication consultancies such as APCO Worldwide, Inc. and Ogilvy New York as well as media corporations like New York Times Company to explore the current trends and practices of corporate communication in US.

Serving the Community through Teaching English (ELC2S02)

The Service-Learning subject ELC2S02 “Serving the Community through Teaching English” offered by the English Language Centre experienced a number of major developments in 2015-16.

The teaching service has gone international. Students taking ELC2S02 now render service in Hong Kong, Guangdong and Cambodia. We now work with six community centres of four non-governmental organisations in Hong Kong, serving about 200 primary school children. The teaching service in Dabu county, Meizhou city of Guangdong continues to expand. Thanks to the gracious support of the Tin Ka Ping Foundation, 50 PolyU students rendered an intensive English reading workshop in three schools in Dabu, serving over 1,400 primary school students in the past summer.

Apart from serving elementary school children, the subject lecturers have explored the possibility of rendering language support service, particularly in the area of speaking, for English subject teachers in Guangdong by employing PolyU students to serve as language facilitators. It was the first time for the teaching team to go to Taiwan and Cambodia. In Taiwan, students served in a primary school in Zhuojhen county of Tainan. In Cambodia, we worked with Emmanuel Christian Elementary School in Phnom Penh.

To enhance PolyU students' cultural exchange experience and to promote sustainable impact of our service, we explored the possibility of involving local partners in our service. In Taiwan and Cambodia, collaboration has been secured respectively with National Cheng Kung University and Human Resources Development Institute. Their students participated in our teaching service and shared their insights and experience as locals with our students.

Owing to the above expansion of service sites and service scopes, the teaching team has also expanded in size. We now have eight teachers on the team.

Internationalising Student Learning Experience: BACBS WIE Trip to the USA 2016

This is the third consecutive year of having departmental international Work-Integrated Education (WIE) trips for students from the BA(Hons) in Chinese and Bilingual Studies (BACBS) programme. Four students embarked on a journey to New York, Washington D.C. and the Bay Area in the USA this summer. They participated in a teaching development project titled “Internationalising Student Learning Experience”, funded by the Learning and Teaching Committee of PolyU.

The objectives of the project are to prepare students to be global citizens and to enhance their cultural awareness and ability to work in a global professional community. The project also engages students to contribute to international themes in the design of the curriculum through peer tutoring after returning from the trip.

During the trip, the team had exclusive office visits, presentations, consultative meetings and dialogues with senior management executives of various global leading organisations such as Google, YouTube, Ogilvy, eBay, Paypal, WGSN and Bidsquare. The team also visited the United Nations, the National History Museum in Washington D.C. and the Tenement Museum in New York.

In order to benefit the wider student community, the team is in the process of creating a number of case studies with international themes based on their overseas experience and conducting sharing sessions with other students in related classes. The sharing sessions have received positive feedback so far with the majority of the students strongly believing (top of the 5 Likert scale) that having peers' case studies based on their overseas experience helped them to learn better.

“The trip has truly broadened my horizons. It is my honour to have dialogue with these talented executives who have achieved remarkably in their lives; their insights have definitely inspired my career planning. The sharing sessions/materials I conducted with my peers have also given me the chance to reflect on my learning which connects the classroom to the international workplace.” --- CBS student Andrew Siu

The WIE team members this year are BACBS students Stevie Cheung, Corrie Poon, Andrew Siu and Alicia Yung, together with the Project Leader Ms Valentina Chan (Teaching Fellow, CBS).

Prof. LI Chor Shing David, Professor and Head

Prof. David C. S. Li obtained his BA in English (Hong Kong), MA in Applied Linguistics (France), and PhD in Linguistics (Germany). Since his first academic appointment as Lecturer (1992), he has developed a keen interest in sociocultural aspects of language learning and use in multilingual settings. He has published in contrastive aspectology (tense and aspect), World Englishes, 'Hongkong English', 'China English', bilingual interaction and code-switching (translanguaging), multilingualism in Greater China, Chinese learners' EFL learning difficulties and error-correction strategies, Cantonese as an additional language in Hong Kong, and South Asian Hongkongers' needs for written Chinese. Currently he is interested in extending the 'Monosyllabic Salience Hypothesis'* (Cantonese) to a comparative study of lexical transference involving Chinese (Cantonese and Mandarin), Japanese, Korean, and English from historical and contemporary perspectives. He is the author of two recent monographs: Multilingual Hong Kong: Languages, Literacies, Identities (Springer, June 2017) and Chinese-English contrastive grammar: An Introduction (with Dr. Zoe Luk, Hong Kong University Press, August 2017). Dr POLITZER-AHLES Stephen, Assistant Professor

Dr Stephen Politzer-Ahles's research uses experimental techniques from psychology and neuroscience to understand how abstract aspects of language are represented and processed in the brain. He applies these techniques to a wide variety of linguistic phenomena encompassing pragmatics (e.g., implicatures), semantics (e.g., complement coercion and presupposition), morphosyntax (e.g., agreement), and phonology (e.g., tone sandhi and underspecification). This research has included languages like English, Mandarin, Arabic, Italian, Korean, Marathi, and Russian. He is also particularly interested in statistical and graphical techniques for the analysis and display of quantitative data in psycholinguistics and neurolinguistics.

Before coming to PolyU, Dr. Politzer-Ahles did research at NYU Abu Dhabi and at Oxford. His work has been published in journals including Brain Research; Journal of Chinese Linguistics; JEP: Human Perception and Performance; Journal of Phonetics; Journal of Second Language Writing; Language, Cognition and Neuroscience; The Mental Lexicon; Neuroscience Letters; and PLoS ONE.

Department of English

Dr Aditi BHATIA, Associate Professor

Dr Aditi Bhatia's research interest is in the area of discourse analysis, with particular reference to the study of written public discourses. Her research employs a novel multi-perspective theoretical framework, that of 'discursive illusions', on which she has published in a number of international journals, including the Journal of Pragmatics, Text & Talk, Journal of Language and Politics, World Englishes, and Discourse & Society, and her recently published monograph, Discursive Illusions in Public Discourse: Theory and Practice (Routledge, London and New York, 2015). She is now engaged in further extending the concept of discursive illusions by investigating the discourses of Public Square movements and Digital Professions.

Before taking up her post at PolyU, Dr Bhatia taught at City University of Hong Kong. She received her BA in Language and Communication from the University of Cardiff, Wales, and PhD in Linguistics from Macquarie University.

Department of English

Dr Phoenix LAM, Assistant Professor

A corpus linguist and a discourse analyst, Dr Phoenix Lam re-joined The Hong Kong Polytechnic University as an Assistant Professor in the Department of English, her alma mater, in July 2016. It was at the Department of English where she obtained her bachelor's and doctorate degrees. Prior to working at the University, Dr Lam was an Assistant Professor in the Department of English Language and Literature at Hong Kong Baptist University.

Dr Lam's research interests are in the areas of computer-mediated communication, corpus linguistics, (multimodal) discourse analysis, pragmatics, and professional communication. In her recent work, she focuses on marketing discourse in both online and offline environments and explores the interactions of different semiotic resources in multimodal promotional texts. Her publications have appeared in journals indexed in the Arts & Humanities Citation Index (AHCI) and the Social Sciences Citation Index (SSCI), including Applied Linguistics, Discourse Studies, English for Specific Purposes, Journal of Pragmatics and Text & Talk.

Department of English

Dr Renia LOPEZ, Assistant Professor

Dr Renia Lopez started working in PolyU in 2007 as a visiting instructor for the (then) SAO department, teaching Spanish as a non-credit subject. Subsequently, she was asked by Department of English to develop a series of modules on Spanish proficiency subjects that were integrated into the BAESP programme in 2010. She then joined ENGL as a full-time staff, taught the subjects and developed the programme including the website, offering content and information. When the idea of the Minor in European Studies was put forward she designed the syllabus for a number of subjects, not only proficiency but also content-based subjects. After a year at the University of Huddersfield as Senior Lecturer in Linguistics and Modern Languages, she rejoined the Department of English as Assistant Professor in European Studies, leading the minor programme.

Her research covers both the use of gesture, a modality used together with language to externalize the thought, and nonverbal behaviour. She obtained funding in October 2015 to conduct a project exploring the differences in gesture between Mexican and Spanish speakers of Spanish, and has just submitted an article on the description of nonverbal cues by one of Spain's most popular modern female writers.

CBS Summer Programme

Date of the event: 28 June 2016

Organised by: Department of Chinese and Bilingual Studies

Based on the huge success of its summer programme in 2015, CBS reran the programme with various fun activities this summer! Twenty-Four S.5 students from different local schools participated and had a wonderful time with the CBS teaching staff and students on PolyU campus.

The objective of the programme was to give the S.5 students a taste of being a CBS student. The programme was made up of 3 sessions, namely “Being a Junior Interpreter”, “PolyU Running Man” and “The Fun of Learning Japanese Language”. Dr Dechao Li taught the basic techniques in simultaneous interpreting (SI) through a series of fun activities. The guest students enjoyed trying the state-of-the-art SI facility at the CBS’ language laboratory. Native Korean and Japanese teaching staff including Ms Haemin Han, Ms Sinae Sim and Ms Masumi Matsumoto introduced their languages to the students respectively during their sessions. The students also enjoyed trying a variety of Korean and Japanese snacks, playing the local games and putting on the authentic Yukata (informal kimono) for fun.

(Left and Middle) During the “Being a Junior Interpreter” workshop, Dr Li teaches the S.5 guest students some basic techniques in simultaneous interpreting through a series of fun activities. Many of them show that they have the potential of being a professional interpreter!

Ms Han and Ms Sim (teaching staff of CBS’ Korean Minor Programme) designed different games to make Korean language learning more interesting for the students. Everyone has a good time during the “PolyU Running Man” session!

Ms Matsumoto (teaching staff of CBS’ Japanese Minor Programme) introduces basic Japanese language and culture to the guest students. They are so excited to try on the beautiful “Yukata” (Japanese traditional clothing).

ENGL Summer Programme

Dates of the event: 11 and 12 July 2016

Organised by: Department of English

ENGL organised a one-day summer programme on both 11 and 12 July, and 37 students from 30 secondary schools participated. The students gained a lot of hands-on experience and interesting knowledge about how to be an effective communicator in English through three practical workshops, namely “Modern fashionable language in English”, “Gendered language through love letters” and “What makes a good PowerPoint presentation – A hands-on experience”. A sharing session was also arranged in which two students from the BA (Hons) English Studies for the Professions programme talked about their study experience.

More than 95% of the participating students found the activities interesting and enjoyed the programme very much. They also indicated that they would recommend the programme to their friends.

The event is part of the PolyU Summer Programme 2016, which has been coordinated by the Secondary School Relations Section (SSRS) since last year. The aim of the programme is to promote PolyU and its undergraduate programmes to local secondary school students.

Students enjoy the lively teaching and practical activities at the workshops given by Ms Angela Tse (8th from right).

At the PowerPoint presentation workshop, students are able to practise the skills they learnt in a group presentation.

Delegation from United Chinese School Committees' Association of Malaysia

Date of the event: 27 September 2016

Organised by: Faculty of Humanities

Following the Faculty's visit to Malaysia for student recruitment in August 2016, the Faculty received an eighteen-person delegation of the United Chinese School Committees' Association of Malaysia (Dong Zong, 董總) to Hong Kong on 27 September 2016, which was led by Ms Hong Woan Ying, CEO of Dongzong.

Dongzong is a leading and influential organisation for Chinese-community-run education in Malaysia. It coordinates the curriculum used in the 60 independent high schools and organises the Unified Examination Certificate (UEC) standardised test. During the visit, FH introduced to the delegation members the Faculty and the uniqueness of its programmes. Prof. Chu Hung-lam, Faculty Dean, was also invited to talk about his views on Malaysian Chinese education reform, as a senior management member of a university. Prof. Chu mentioned that the reform should be visionary, practical and applicable in order to achieve effective and sustainable results.

#1 Talk by Prof. Alex Molasiotis

The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly: Life in Today's Greece Amidst financial and Refugee Crises

Date of the event: 31 October 2016

Organised by: General Education Centre

Prof. Alex Molasiotis, Chair Professor and Head of School of Nursing at PolyU, delivered a talk on Greek civilizations in the past and commented on her recent crises in the recent years on 31 October 2016. Greece had a great impact on early world civilizations in the fields of philosophy, arts, literature and architecture, but the good side of ancient Greece met with the bad and ugly sides of its recent financial and refugee crises. After suggesting different ways to rejuvenate the economic failure of Greece, Prof. Molasiotis also shared with the audience tragic pictures of the recent refugee crisis. GEC conducted a survey about the talk and most attendees suggested having more discussion on the refugee issues and less on history. It seems to suggest that the bad and the ugly sides of Greece gained more attention from the audience.

Eurasia-Pacific Uninet Conference on “Global Studies”

Dates of the event: 1-2 November 2016

Organised by: Faculty of Humanities

It is a great honour for the Faculty of Humanities (FH) to be invited by the Eurasia-Pacific Uninet (EPU) to be a collaborator of the conference on “Global Studies” on 1-2 November 2016. With the tremendous support from the Austrian Consulate General of Hong Kong, the University of Vienna and the EPU, this is the second time we have the honour to assist in hosting the conference. This is an excellent opportunity to create synergies between European and Asian academic research, exchanges and collaborations, and to bring to light research issues of common concern and interest. This conference on “Global Studies” is of immediate benefit to FH colleagues and students because they can gain new perspectives of the world around us through participating in the conference.

11th International Symposium on Teaching English at Tertiary Level

Dates of the event: 9-10 December 2016

Organised by: Department of English

ENGL held the 11th International Symposium on Teaching English at Tertiary Level (11th ISTETL) on 9-10 December 2016. This is a joint conference by the Inter-University Centre for Applied Language Sciences operated by PolyU, Tsinghua University and Zhejiang University. More than 160 participants from 84 universities in 27 nations and regions joined the event.

With “Rethinking ELT in Higher Education” as the theme, Prof. Andy Kirkpatrick from Griffith University and Prof. John Flowerdew from City University of Hong Kong (now retired) each delivered a keynote speech at the symposium. Prof. Kirkpatrick shared an empirical study on the gap between language policy and the ad hoc implementation, while Prof. Flowerdew introduced how corpus-based approaches can facilitate the academic writing of postgraduate students.

Teaching English in higher education will remain to be important in the globalised era because of the dominant use of the English language in global industries. This symposium has become a regular platform for language educators and researchers around the world to exchange information and explore the ways for improving language education.

Music Exchange between Shenzhen University and PolyU

Date of the event: 17 December 2016

Organised by: Confucius Institute of Hong Kong with Communication and Public Affairs Office as co-organiser

The music concert, named 港深(講心)友樂共聚 in Chinese, was held in the afternoon of 17 December 2016 in Chiang Chen Theatre as a special event to celebrate PolyU's 80th anniversary. To share our joy, PolyU's old friends from Shenzhen University were invited to present their wonderful performance. This also marked the second festive collaboration between PolyU's and Shenzhen University's staff bands and choirs. As Christmas drew near, we also invited about 120 elderly guests from local communities in the districts of Yau Ma Tei, Tseung Kwan O and Tsz Wan Shan to share the joy and warmth of PolyU's social mission.

The performing units also included the Social Dance Group of PolyU Staff Club, Saxophone Team 101, and a special Pipa performance by Dr Dana Lo Sze Man from the University Health Service and Dr Li Meng from CIHK. The concert received full-house participation with around 250 guests whose appreciation of music gave us much satisfaction in return. All performers were excited about this amazing collaboration to compliment the success of PolyU and conveyed their best wishes to the University's continuous glory in the decades to come.

Living Contact: Modern Ties Between China and India – An International Conference

Dates of the event: 20-21 December 2016

Organised by: Department of Chinese Culture

Researchers from India, the United States and Greater China met at PolyU on 20-21 December 2016 to unearth political, literary and intellectual ties between China, India and the wider region from the Opium War through the first half of the twentieth century. Thirteen papers were presented at the international conference “Living Contact: Modern Ties Between China and India.” While interactions between political leaders received their fair share of attention, the papers also highlighted the multifaceted ties between the two societies brought about by soldiers, revolutionaries, pilgrims, entrepreneurs and institutions. The conference forms a part of the Chiang Ching-kuo Foundation for International Scholarly Exchange-funded research project “Beyond Pan-Asianism: China-India Connections, 1911-1949” led by Dr Brian Tsui (CC) and Prof. Tansen Sen (Baruch College, CUNY).

Historians and literary scholars present latest research on China-India ties.

Prof. Anand Yang from the University of Washington speaks on images of China in Hindi and Urdu publications at the turn of the twentieth century.

FH Supports PolyU's Green Living Culture

PolyU has stepped up the efforts in advocating green and sustainable initiatives in the recent decade. Having signed up to meet commitment to energy use, waste reduction and 3R, i.e. reduce, reuse and recycle, FH colleagues participated in the 'Live GREEN Dress GREEN Day' organised by the Green Council on 6 June.

The Faculty Office has also registered for Green PolyU Awards – Green Office Programme, a campus-wide sustainability initiative developed by the Campus Sustainability Office. The Faculty Office will keep on carrying out various green measures, programmes and initiatives to make a greener working environment.

FH goes GREEN: eat green, dress green and live green.

Sharing from Recipients of “Faculty of Humanities Distinguished Thesis Award for PhD Students 2015/16”

The “Faculty of Humanities Distinguished Thesis Award for PhD students” aims at rewarding PhD students in the Faculty for the distinguished quality of their thesis produced during their studies at PolyU. Recipients of the award this year, Dr Sui Xin from ENGL and Dr Yu Jindong from CC, were invited by the FH Newsletter to share their joy.

Dr Susie Xin SUI (ENGL) – Recipient of “Faculty of Humanities Distinguished Thesis Award for PhD Students 2015/16”

It is fortunate for me to have graduated twice from the Department of English of the Faculty of Humanities (FH), first from the Master’s and second the PhD programme. It is even more fortunate for me to be awarded the FH Distinguished Thesis Award for PhD Students. I know that all the PhD dissertations of FH are of very high quality, and mine is only one of them. I am grateful for being able to represent my peers in accepting this award. During these years, I have been longing for the graduation every single day. But when the day really comes, I feel reluctant to say goodbye. The Faculty is a place full of fond memories, responsible supervisors, knowledgeable teachers, helpful colleagues and friendly peers. The education I received here would have a far-reaching influence on my future teaching and research, and would certainly benefit more and more students. I look forward to seeing the prosperous development of FH. At last, I would like to extend my deepest love to my dearest supervisors Prof. Winnie Cheng and Prof. Martin Warren for their guidance in my study and in my life.

Dr YU Jindong (CC) – Recipient of “Faculty of Humanities Distinguished Thesis Award for PhD Students - Merit Prize 2015/16”

I’m very glad to receive this year’s “Faculty of Humanities Distinguished Thesis Award - Merit Prize”. My thesis is titled “A Study of the Evaluation and Appraisal System of Ming Dynasty Civil Officials”. I would like to thank Prof. Chu Hung-lam, my chief supervisor, for his advice and guidance.

Prof. Chu passed on his professional knowledge, as well as qualities of patience, concentration and perseverance, all of which are and will be the greatest asset in my career. I would like to take this opportunity to thank Prof. Chu and the Faculty of Humanities again.

Sharing from DALS Graduating Students

The Doctor of Applied Language Sciences (DALS) programme produced its third graduating class since its launch in 2012. Three graduates from this first-in-Asia professional doctorate programme offered by the Faculty has been invited by the Newsletter to share their views about the programme.

DALS: Paving the way for your future success!

Four years ago, I was an ambitious young college teacher looking forward to making a difference in my career. Due to the poor scholastic competence and narrowly-scoped knowledge in linguistics, I found it rather hard to do so. Three years ago, when stepping into the classroom of PolyU, I simply had no idea whether I would meet the graduation requirement of DALS, and more importantly gain the requisite academic abilities for my future research. Half a year ago, I graduated —bringing back home my doctoral degree as well as insights into my own research domain. And now with the DALS degree, I managed to be promoted in the university I work, and started to undertake some administrative responsibility as well. All these sound like a miracle to me — even till now! But I know at the very bottom of my heart that without the help of my beloved supervisors, Dr Kim Sun-A and Prof. David D Qian, along with other faculty staff in FH, including helpful and warm-hearted Hannah and Shirbe, what I've achieved today (though still quite limited academically) is anything but possible. Thus, I would like to avail myself of this opportunity to tell those potential and intended candidates that studying the DALS programme is actually a wise choice for you to make, if you do wish to accomplish more than you could today, and that your learning experience here in FH will be an unforgettable memory in your days ahead.

I would recommend PolyU's DALS programme because it makes studying flexible and adaptable to all. It perfectly suits my need by giving me the opportunity to first study intensively the courses, then go back to work while writing the thesis at the same time. Being a fresh graduate, I can reflect that PolyU has provided me with the opportunity to explore an array of different possibilities for my future, most of which I would not have been aware of without taking up the DALS programme. This, combined with the continual dedication and commitment to improve the quality of services to students, is what makes PolyU's DALS so unique. The city of Hong Kong offers everything any student could want and more. It is a bustling and stunning cosmopolitan city with excellent shopping, restaurants, cafes, and of course, cultural events.

DALS programme is an excellent and well-organised doctoral programme for those who would like to achieve high-level academic performance, while keeping their current jobs. I am fully satisfied with the quality of the lectures by the world-class professors. They opened the door to a new world and invited us into the deeper forest of academic theories and practices. I had never imagined that I would be a researcher of professional communication in English when I started my DALS study as a Japanese lecturer. Professor Martin Warren, my thesis supervisor, has demonstrated sophisticated professionalism and guided me along my academic path. The insightful advice enabled me to complete my thesis. The administrative support is also an outstanding strength of the DALS programme. The challenge of studying on DALS is one of my best choices that still keeps providing me with some avenues to explore as a researcher.
