

Outstanding Student of Faculty

Outstanding Student of Faculty of Engineering

FENG Lin

Bachelor of Science in Biomedical Engineering
Department of Biomedical Engineering

The Outstanding Student Award not only serves as a recognition of my unwavering commitment to personal development but also as a powerful encouragement for me to aim higher, break boundaries, and embrace new challenges. Pursuing undergraduate study in Hong Kong was not easy for me at first, leading to various challenges. However, the nurturing and supportive environment of PolyU helped me overcome obstacles, experience significant personal growth, and discover my true passions.

At PolyU, I engaged in various student associations, voluntary services, research initiatives, innovation competitions, and outbound internship and exchange programmes. Through the Undergraduate Research and Innovation Scheme, I had the privilege of immersing myself in the realm of cutting-edge research, which honed my critical thinking and research skills, and laid a solid foundation for my subsequent research internship at McGill University. As a CURI (College of Undergraduate Researchers and Innovators) member, I got the chance to collaborate with researchers from diverse fields and formed teams in different competitions. All these experiences ignited my passion for research and solidified my decision to pursue further studies in the field of exploring drug-targeting molecular chaperones for age-related diseases such as diabetes.
